(Channeling begins)

Djwhal Khul here. Tashi Delek.

Alright then. What I want to talk about now is Interdependence from a spiritual perspective. You can certainly read up on it from a psychological perspective and perhaps even have your own concept of how it relates to you.

And since it's a large nation celebrating Independence Day and there is a similar holiday in many other countries at different times of course, I want to talk about what freedom or independence truly means, from again a more esoteric perspective.

So interdependence is a recognition of the connectedness of all things and that all things depend upon other things. At the same time it is a realization that you're not codependent or in other words it's more of a voluntary exchange.

For example, you might pick up a pen to write down some words, or a pencil to jot down a grocery list. You're sort of interconnected even with those who made the writing device, the paper that you're writing on, where that came from and the tree spirits so there's an interdependence with all of Creation.

So for this week I suggest that you focus on the vastness of that interdependence and just really see if you could feel that connected thread going all through the Universe. Don't try to limit it to daily life although you could bring it back and say "Ok, I'm driving in a car and the tires came from you know this source", you see, you can get a sense of that interdependence in a very healthy way.

Alright. As always, thank you and my love to you.
