Djwhal Khul here. Tashi Delek.

Alright. This is, of course, the first day of Summer is coming. We have heavenly occurrences that I think are going to bring in more heat, more passion and ultimately more love. So this is a time to really kind of focus or channel your passion, your heat, your devotion, into a productive means. So if you're passionate about cleaning up the environment, get behind something you feel supports that and take action.

If you're heated up about inhumane circumstances, take action in that direction to remedy those situations. So this is a time when I see, maybe even a lot of debates or arguments, social media, that sort of thing, where people again are still polarizing, they're still in a strong polarized configuration. So there's one person saying "This is perfectly all right" and another person saying "That is never acceptable."

So it heats up, it gets more intense, it gets more polarized. So as an individual, your remedy is to move in the direction that you feel called to do. Don't just sit there and argue about your side or your viewing point or maybe you're practicing the spiritual perspective which is rise above all the drama and look down at it. See why all the players are playing their roles and go into a neutral observation space. And then you may decide in the end, "Yes the water supply does need to be cleaned up" and "Yes children should not be thirsty and hungry and not have a bed and or your elderly need to have air conditioned comfort during the summer" or whatever it is. So then you may proceed forward, taking action, but after going into neutral observer, it will be much more effective.

Alright Dear Ones. As always, thank you and my love to you.
